Damage Done.

The twister appeared to have lifted near Ocklawaha and next dipped in to 2 turbulent settlement in Flagler county where 26 buildings were demolished, most of them shacks in which negro laborers lived. The tenting still was destroyed. This was about 12 miles from Bunnell.

One Killed When Trains Collide

Several Members of Passenger Train Are Shaken Up In Wreck.

FARGO, Minn., Jan. 30.—(AP)—C. H. Heiligan, 55, of Duna, Ill., a Missouri Pacific freight conductor was killed when a Cotton Belt train crashed the rear end of a Missouri Pacific freight near Dexter Junction, Missouri, 7 miles north of here today.

The same tracks are used by both railroads at the point where the collision occurred. Both were north-bound trains.

Heiligan was in the freight car when the passenger train struck demolishing it and wrecking other freight cars. The train had stopped to repair a defective carrying iron. It is believed Heiligan had gone to sleep while waiting for the repairs.

Taxi Cab Men Are Found Shot To Death In

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(AP)—A night of violence began with a $100,000 bombing attack which came to a tragic end with a double murder. A bomb completely wrecked a one-story brick building which housed a wholesale grocery company on the north side. Eight people were injured and debris was scattered for many blocks.

Johnny Gennaro, a pal of the gangster, and with a reputation of his own, was shot when he stepped from a Chicago sanitarium, and probably is fatally wounded.

Barney Mitchell, treasurer of the Checked Taxi company, and George Jackson, a driver, were found shot to death in Jackson's cab at Farwell avenue and Ridge boulevard early today.

Police have slight clues to the identity of the murderers and the ones responsible for the bombing.

Billingsley Buys Out Johnson Firm

Senior Partner's Death
Ends Association of 33 Years Here.

Notice of the dissolution of the firm of Johnson, Billingsley & Johnson, and Billingsley & Ridgill, and their purchase by T. R. Billingsley, appears in today's Star.

The dissolution, caused by the death of A. L. Johnson, senior member of the firm, which occurred in Cleveland, Ohio, October 16, 1929, marks the end of the Johnson-Billingsley partnership which ran continuously for 33 years.

Mr. Johnson's business career in association with Mr. Billingsley began January 1, 1896, when the former bought the interest of A. M. Denman in the firm of Spears & Denman. This business then carried on for one year under the firm name of M. M. Spears & Co., and on January 1, 1897 S. W. Brundage purchased the interest of M. M. Spears and the business was continued for another year under the firm name of S. W. Brundage & Co. On January 1, 1898, A. L. Johnson and T. R. Billingsley purchased the interest of S. W. Brundage, and the business was carried on for several years thereafter under the firm name of T. R. Billingsley & Co. The name of the firm was later changed to Johnson & Billingsley, and was conducted under that name until January 1, 1926, when Jno. W. Ridgill who had been in the employ of the firm since 1911 was taken in as a partner, and the business operated from that time until the dissolution under the name of Johnson, Billingsley & Ridgill.

T. R. Billingsley was bookkeeper for the firm of M. M. Spears & Co. during the year 1895, and for S. W. Brundage & Co. for the year 1897, so it will be seen that he had been associated with Mr. Johnson since January 1, 1896.

Mr. Johnson was a typical Southern gentleman of the old school, and loved the South and all its traditions. He was a devoted husband and father, and a faithful friend. He was honest and fearless, and hated sham and hypocrisy. He was kind, considerate, and sympathetic, particularly towards the poor. He was a man of extraordinary business ability and clear vision and judgment. He directed the affairs of the various firms with which he was connected until just a few months before his death. His employees and partners all love and respected him.

DROPPING FOOD FROM THE SKY!

Just a moment before the above picture was taken, Al Nesensohn, cameraman for Hope Star and NEA Service flying as a food relief worker in a Red Cross plane, dropped a big package of food to a score of persons marooned in the farmhouse on the right, indicated by arrow, near Decker, Ind. The cameraman enrolled as a relief worker and made the flight over the flood-swept area through arrangements with H. B. Williamson, Red Cross relief director at Vincennes, and Major Richard P. Taylor, commander of the 113th aero squadron, Indiana National Guard. Hundreds of farm houses in the flood area were half submerged by ice and water and planes offered the only means of conveying food and medicine. Below, Maundy Manning, a pneumonia patient, is pictured as she was taken from a plane at Vincennes after a remarkable flight by Pilot O. P. Graff, who dared death to land his ship on the ice floes at Claypool Hill, Ind., to bring the woman out.

Is Exonerated In Call Killing

Duty and Deputy Testify
Had No Intention To Hit Fleeing Men.

LEWISVILLE, Jan. 30.—Sheriff R. H. Duty and his deputy, Bryan Cryer, of Lafayette county, were exonerated in justice court here Wednesday in connection with the fatal shooting of Oscar Call, 26, in a raid on a still 15 miles south of Lewisville, last Sunday.

The verdict was returned by Peace Justice C. V. Bray after testimony had been introduced tending to show that the officers were justified in the shooting. Evidence presented at the hearing revealed that the sheriff and his deputy had caught Call and two others in the act of operating a still. When the officers approached the men fled, refusing to heed cries to halt. Duty and Cryer then began to fire at the fleeing men, shooting, they said on each side of them. They said that a shot evidently hit a tree and glanced, striking the man. No evidence was brought out to show that Call was armed.

Both the sheriff and his deputy said that they did not fire directly at any one of the fugitives. Both are considered good marksmen and both said they shot to stop the men, aiming carefully ahead and behind them.

After the shooting the officers said they returned to Lewisville and in about an hour were informed that Call was at the home of John Glass, a mile from the scene of the shooting, mortally wounded. The doctor who examined him said that he had been wounded by one bullet. He was taken to Texarkana and died in a hospital. Steve Carrigan, prosecuting attorney, has announced that the Lafayette county grand jury will investigate the shooting at its next session.

Good Program at Kiwanis Meeting

Local Talent Furnishes
Interesting Numbers
At Luncheon Today.

Hope, Kiwanians were entertained with two delightful dances at their regular meeting at Hotel Barlow Thursday noon. Little Miss Josephine Ayers gave a clever dance, and Little Miss Patsy Ann Campbell entertained with a clog dance and a song. Both were accompanied by Mrs. Robert Campbell, mother of Patsy. Ann John F. Cox was in charge of the program.

Frank May gave a report of the recent district Kiwanis convention which was held at Kansas City. Plans were made at that convention for greatly increasing the membership of the different Kiwanis clubs, as well as the addition of more clubs in cities which do not have one at the present time.

Matt Press, manager of the Public Saenger Theatre was introduced by Mr. Cox. He asked the endorsement of the Puzitz theatre's plans for a "Booster Week," to be observed next week in each of the towns where there is a Public theatre, since this amusement organization is vitally interested in the future growth of such towns. The club willingly agreed to endorse the program to observe a "Booster Week." They offered their assistance and co-operation in securing the greatest possible benefit of this movement, which was deemed worthy of the support of this club, especially since it carries out the slogan, "We build."

The report of the blast was heard by G. H. Turner, of the Frisco, and other neighbors. Mr. Toney was taken to Julia Chester hospital and doctors began emergency treatment. In the house at the time were Mrs. Toney, who suffered burns on the hands; and their two small children who escaped injury.

Mr. Toney, it was said, had set up a new gas stove Wednesday in the living and dining rooms. When he arose the next morning to light the fire this area exploded, blowing out a portion of the house wall. Mrs. Toney and the children, still in the bedroom, escaped serious injury, although Mrs. Toney burned her hands trying to reach her husband.

Following the explosion the house caught fire, and the city trucks were called. The blaze was extinguished after several minutes.

In Twelve Months
From Sidelines.

LAMESA, Tex., Jan. 30.—An unusual record in the sale of farm products was made during 1929 by E. W. Heister, farmer of O'Donnell, Tex., 18 miles northeast of here. Heister realized a profit of $3,501.31 during the 12 months from the sale of eggs, butter, cream, hogs, poultry, cows, beans and mules. The money from these farm products is above the amount he made from his cotton and feed crops. Heister made $1,228.40 during the year from the sale of butter and $1,320 from the sale of live stock. He kept an itemized account of each month during the year, which shows that April was his most profitable month, with $691.90 profit, of which amount $97.50 was show winnings.

Booster Week At Saenger Theatre

Special Events Planned
In Home Loyalty Program.

It is a well-known fact that any town or city's best assets are a healthy and happy populace. Boosters, those people who are always willing to praise their town to the skies, are also in the class of "best assets." It is the easiest thing in the world for one to have a good word, whether it be about his neighbor's actions or the various and sundry industries within his or her home town. Boosters are common, knockers are rare, but the fact remains it is more distinguished to be a booster! Because of the large number of boosters within Hope, the Public theatres have sponsored Public Booster Week, through its local theatre, the Saenger. Every Public theatre is a 100 per cent booster for the city it is housed in. Manager Press of the Saenger theatre is backing the movement with all the resources at his command and is enlisting the aid of local merchants in getting together all possible methods of putting over the Public Booster Week in a great fashion. It is the most gigantic movement ever made in Hope to bring before the eyes of the local citizens the true value of all the industries and products of this city. The Hope Star is cooperating 100 per cent with the movement taking the lead along with Manager Press. Special announcements of the events planned for Public Booster Week will be made in the Hope Star within the next few days.

By refraining from over-indulgence

Why Tragedies Happen

NO tragedy that can occur in our modern civilization is more terrible than the accident that sends helpless little children to their death. Such a thing stirs us to an involuntary instinctive protest against the very nature of the universe, it seems as if something must be very wrong with a world in which tragedies of that kind can happen.

But the world's inscrutable laws operate through human agents, and when some catastrophe brings death to a group of children, it usually develops that some human fault or shortcoming is primarily responsible.

Thus the two dreadful motor bus accidents that recently took place in Ohio can be traced directly to a failure on the part of the men in charge.

The accidents were not dissimilar. First there was a smashup at Wooster, O., when a school bus carrying a group of youngsters home from a basketball game drove on a railroad crossing and was struck by a train. With seven young lives lost. Then a couple of weeks later, came the tragedy at Berea, where nine children were killed when an express train crashed into a bus that was taking them to school.

Each of these shocking occurrences moves us to ask, "Why are such dreadful things allowed to happen in this world?" But in each case, if we look into things, we find that the accident could easily have been prevented.

In each case the weather was cold, and frost on the bus windows prevented the driver from seeing the approaching train, while it is assumed that the laughter and talk of the children kept each driver from hearing the engine.

But those are poor excuses. No bus driver should ever take the slightest chance at a grade crossing. If visibility is poor, the driver should halt his bus, get out and look up and down the track. This would involve a little extra trouble, of course, but no other course is safe or sensible.

Every bus company owes it to the public to compel its drivers to obey that rule without any exceptions.

On the Wrong Foot Again

"... relegating the weekly newspaper to the limbo of vanished utility."

The above quotation is taken from an editorial in the Tuesday edition of the Commercial Appeal headed "The Weekly Newspaper."

The Commercial Appeal is a great newspaper, and usually the reasoning of its editorial matter is well taken, and logical. But in the editorial referred to, the writer shows an absolutely lack of knowledge of the weekly newspaper when he relegating them to the "limbo of vanished utility." That time will never come, brother, as long as there are any small towns left in these United States in which we live.

There are, to be sure, too many little struggling weekly newspapers. But this time is rapidly passing by the consolidation of two or three weekly papers in a town to one strong, progressive, substantial weekly. As for the need, or usefulness of the weekly press ever passing—that will never be, for they are too potent a factor in the lives of the citizens of every community.

To be sure national and international news reaches the people quickly through the medium of the metropolitan dailies and the radio. But the writer of the editorial referred to, shows a sad lack of knowledge of the contents of the average weekly newspaper, which does not contain national news, but the every day happenings of the community, and county, in which it is located.

How much local news of the small towns does the Commercial Appeal give to the readers in each locality? Does it tell of the bridge party of Mrs. So and So, or does it chronicle the visitations of the citizens? Does it give the meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Society, or that Mr. John Doe is the proud father of an eight pound boy? It is this personal touch that holds the weekly newspaper to the very heartstrings of the local community.

Should such a time ever come, as the editorial suggests, it will be a sad day for our nation, for it will mean the disintegration of the small town spirit, the spirit of America, for the weekly newspaper is the pioneer, the trail blazer, in the many thousands of small communities throughout the length and breadth of the United States, that holds aloft the banner to its citizens and says: "Onward, follow on."

In the future our admonition to the writer of the editorial is the same that Rastus gave to the Judge when his Honor requested the negro to tell him how he succeeded in stealing the Judge's chickens, viz: "Jedge, you had better stay on the bench whar you am familiar."—Wee Point (Miss.) Times-Leader.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The exact effects of President Hoover's "prosperity conference" following the stock market crash of last autumn will come in for critical review here shortly when the executive committee of the president's national business survey conference meets here to find out just how well the nation has succeeded in surmounting the effects of the downfall of speculation.

As the committee prepares to meet, the Department of Commerce comes to bat with figures showing that 1929 was a banner year for U. S. exports, which rose to a higher figure than ever before, except for the abnormal years.

In 1929, it is revealed, exports amounted to $5,248,483,000—more than $1,000,000,000 greater than for 1928. Nearly 47 per cent of this total was made up of finished manufactures. Similarly, the nation's imports last year amounted to $4,400,634,000, a gain of more than $300,000,000 over 1928.

The Future Program
Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the conference, indicates that its activity will continue unabated.

"Concerted efforts to carry into execution the general purpose of the conference by trade groups and local organizations," he says, "already have been appreciably effective, particularly in allaying groundless apprehension and sustaining confidence, and this is reflected in a noticeable improvement in business activity."

"The executive committee will consider what further steps may be taken and what direction this concerted effort should take to achieve most effectively the aims of the conference."

The old question of Philippine independence seems certain to get more extended consideration this winter than it has had for years.

Torric and insular affairs—The Senate committee on territories and insular affairs, headed by Connecticut's Republican senator, Hiram Bingham, has opened hearings on the subject, and has before it three resolutions bearing on the matter. These include the king resolution for outright independence, the Bingham resolution for a conference at Manila next fall on independence and the Vandenberg resolution asking the committee to take ardent autonomy for the islands into account.

Prospects for independence are brighter than they have been in a long time, due to the fact that agricultural and other interests are beginning to demand that the Philippines be made subject to tariff restrictions.

Manuel Roxas, speaker of the Philippine House of Representatives, is here to speak his mind before the committee.

"No matter what the outcome of the deliberations may be," he says, "while striving for our freedom we will continue to feel that America's heart is with us, and her flag waving gloriously over the Philippines will, as in the old days, mean to every man, woman and child in our country the unchallenged symbol of liberty and democracy which it is America's sacred mission to spread over the world."

STOP!--REASON!--THINK!

MR. FARMER—Are you making any preparation to assure a profit on your next years work? Will you operate as you have always done, or will you use some machine that will enable you to put in the 10 or 20 acres that were lying out last year, working it as easily as you have formerly done the 10 or 20 acres less?

The answer to your problem is to make more products with the same expense and on the increase in man's productive efforts through the use of machines will enable us to do this. Hauling with a team and wagon is too slow and too expensive, so that we all use trucks. Why not apply the same reasoning to other farm operations?

It isn't so impossible, as we will assist you in financing the tool you need. Why not come in and talk to us about it?

Menu For the Family

BY SISTER MARY

N.S.A. Service Writer

THE housewife of today has much for which to thank modern science and invention, but few innovations mean more to her than the marvelous advances made in food preparation and whipping facilities. Food is such an important part of daily living that any process which makes possible the wide distribution of perishable products full of health-giving properties is of paramount significance.

Inland housekeepers are able to serve deep-sea fish to their families with the same ease and regularity formerly possible only to those living close to the ocean. The fresh fish fillets require no scaling, cleaning or trimming and are ready to cook as soon as unwrapped.

From the nutrition standpoint, sea foods are most valuable. The quality of their protein is of the best, their mineral content of iodine, calcium and copper is noteworthy, and vitamins A, C and D are present.

If fish must be kept in the house for any length of time after purchasing, put it in the coldest part of the refrigerator until the moment of its preparation for cooking.

After unwrapping the fillets, wipe them gently with a cheese-

Baked Fillets with Stuffing

Prepare a well-seasoned bread stuffing, adding 1-2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce and 2 teaspoons lemon juice to each cup of stuffing. Place 1 fillet on a well-greased baking pan and cover with an inch layer of stuffing. Cover stuffing with another fillet and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a hot oven. Baste every 10 minutes with 1-4 cup hot water that has 1 tablespoon fat melted in it. Put on hot platter and garnish with lemon sections. Serve at once.

Cloth dampened in cold water. Sprinkle with lemon juice and let stand on ice for half an hour before cooking. Frozen fillets need not be thawed before broiling or baking.

Broiling, pan-broiling, baking, deep-fat frying or poaching in milk all are excellent methods for cooking the fish fillets available in all parts of the country.

Baked fillets with stuffing is a delicious dish. Served with spinach combined with mushrooms, glazed sweet potatoes, a jellied tomato salad and a fruit dessert, a nourishing, well-balanced meal suitable for family or informal "company" use is provided.

Shall the Citizens of Hope Sell the Water and Light Plant? No.

We have one of the best municipal Water and Light plants of any city in the state of Arkansas, of which we should be proud. It is under very efficient management. The proceeds from our Water and Light Plant have built us a City Hall, which we should be proud of. I understand that there has been a movement on for some time to sell our Plant. I don't know whether or not it is true, but I can't see why the citizens of Hope would want to sell our Plant. If we sold it, the money would be spent, and then where would we get our revenue to run our town?

I am running for Alderman from Ward 2. I own property in Ward 2 and am interested not alone in Ward 2, but in the good of the entire town. I have been in Hope ever since 1901, coming here with the Ivory Handle Company, and have been connected with them for almost the whole time that the Company has been here.

It was told to me by a friend that someone had said that I was in favor of selling the Water and Light Plant, but I am not, and there is no man that has ever heard me make such statement. I, for one, am in favor of keeping our Light Plant; in other words, keeping what we have and improving what we have. Every citizen in the City of Hope should be proud of our fine Plant.

I am writing this letter so that the voters in my Ward may know just where I stand. I may not have the opportunity to see them personally, but if I am elected, I will do everything in my power for the up-building of our City as a whole.

Mass: A Tragic Figure

Carl Mays, one of the best of the old tribe of underhand pitchers, has passed from the big leagues. Here was one of the most tragic and temperamental figures in baseball the storm center of controversies that divided the American League into warring camps, and one of the chief actors in a drama of death that almost caused his banishment from the game at the peak of his career.

He was a man of ice, nerve and wit. Some of his remarks are classical, and one chance bit of gossip almost resulted in a baseball exposure that might have rivaled the White Sox scandal. The fact that a sports writer happened to hear the remark led to an investigation into the conduct of an important series. When the reporter was called to the stand and asked to reveal what he knew he refused to talk. But from time to time there were unwholesome rumors about the part Mays had played in certain important games.

Has His Own Way

Mays had one of the best years of his career in 1921 when he led the American League pitchers. Despite the fact that he was working under a three-year contract, he let it be known to his owners that he considered he was worth more money to the Yankees than he was being paid. Several years before that he had brought about a serious controversy when he refused to pitch for the Boston Red Sox any longer, declaring he wished to be traded to the New York Yankees. It was with the Yankees he finally landed, too, after suspension by President Ban Johnson failed to move him.

Then there was the unfortunate incident of the death of Ray Chapman, the Cleveland shortstop. Chapman was killed by a ball pitched by Mays in the heat of the pennant race of 1920. A movement was started to have the subliminal hurler banned from the game. As we remember it, a great deal depended upon what Tris Speaker said of the affair, as it had been charged Mays was purposely "dusting off" the Cleveland batters during the game in which Chapman was killed. Speaker, rising to the occasion, declared the sad event the result of an accident, and said it never could be construed as anything else.

Losers Close Games

Mays kept on pitching and fighting. Then came the world series of 1921 in which he was called upon to bear the brunt of the burden in the battles between the Yankees and Giants. Mays pitched the first game for the Yankees, winning 3 to 0. His next start was in the fourth game. For seven innings he held the Giants with-out a run, only one hit being made off that under-arm delivery. But in the eighth and ninth innings the Giants got to him, winning 4 to 2. He appeared again in the seventh game of the series. Instead of winning, 1 to 0, as he deserved, according to the kind of ball he pitched, he lost, 2 to 1, in field errors giving the Giants the needed margin.

Bill Tollison Not Guilty of Murder

Malvern Jury Gives Reynolds Brothers 14 Years for Robberies.

MALVERN, Jan. 30.—Bill Tollison, aged 21, charged with second degree murder for the fatal stabbing of John Manning, aged 45, at Caney, 18 miles west of here September 12, 1927, was found not guilty by a jury here Wednesday.

Tollison testified that he stabbed Manning in self-defense after he had been threatened. Officers say that the slaying was the result of an argument over the watering of a team of mules at Manning's mill.

Eddie and Dossie Reynolds, brother of Hot Springs, were given eight years each on charges of burglary and grand larceny in connection with the looting of the Magnet Cove postoffice, and six years each for the robbery of a store at Donaldson. Hot Springs.

The brothers refused to answer questions of attorneys and refused the services of all lawyers offered them. They refused to plead.

Three Hot Springs officers, Detective Capt. Arch Cooper, and Detective Herbert Akers and Arthur Young, came here to refute charges that the brothers had been subjected to the "third degree" in obtaining written confessions.

Leonard Yates, implicated with the Reynolds brothers, escaped from the county jail Monday and had not been apprehended. He was scheduled to face trial with the brothers.

Fred Taylor escaped with Yates.

Coast's 'Big' Hitter Is Tiger Prospect

After Failure To Break In With Yanks, Goes To Detroit Tigers.

DETROIT, Jan. 30.—(P)—Larrupin Liza Funk will go on the firing line in Detroit when the battle begins for Harry Hellman's old outfield job.

Funk, you know, is the speedy little outfielder who failed in two tries at a Yankee post for the god reason that Ruth, Combs and Meusel would yield to no one.

Liza, so they say in the American Association and the Pacific coast league, is a great little outfielder. They thought so much of this larrupin' lad in the association that they nicknamed him Liza. His right name, as the record states, is Elias Calvin Funk.

Funk tried to break the Ruth-Combs-Meusel combine in both 1928 and 1929, both times unsuccessfully, and was so provoked at the second reflection on his ability as a big time bluffer that he hustled out to Hollywood and slammed the ball at a terrific clip, finishing the season with an average of .383 for 146 games.

That put Liza right up in company with the great "Smack 'em" Smead Jolley. In fact Smead was one of only two sluggers rating higher than Funk in the coast loop average last year.

Anyway, the Tigers paid out something like $25,000 for the chap who will be one of three men struggling for Hellman's old position.

Funk, a native of Oklahoma City, is 23 years old, and weighs 160 pounds. His height is five feet, eight inches. He played his first pro baseball with Oklahoma City of the Western league. He spent 1927 and 1928 with St. Paul.

"That's right, we're hunting," repeated the girl. The judge, wishing to save them further embarrassment asked them into his inner office.

"You want a license?" he asked. "The two looked relieved. "That's right, we want a license," the youth responded. "We can't go around together very well without one. I understand the sheriff would be apt to pick us up." The girl gave a bashful giggle.

How old are you?

The judge asked. The girl became ruffled. Then came more questions: "Are you two related in any way? Has there ever been insanity in your family? Have you ever been previously married?" "She is my sister," the youth answered. "Neither of us is crazy; neither of us wants to be."

"Then what is your idea for coming in here after a license?" The youth smiled patiently. "We are trying to tell you," he said, "that our old lizzie needs a 1930 license or we will get pinched."

Tinymites' and 'Little Joe' Mourn as 'Knick' Passes On

Noted Artist Will Be Buried at Auburn, Washington

Irving S. Knickerbocker

CLEVELAND, Jan. 29.—Irving S. Knickerbocker who at 32 had es- thousands of newspaper readers sketches, which appeared daily in newspapers throughout the country, is dead as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident here.

Knickerbocker who at 32 had es- through his comic drawings and published himself as one of the lead- ing comic artists in the country, was killed when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by another car.

With a group of friends, Knickerbocker was on his way home from a dance. The force of the collision drove the car in which he was riding into a telephone pole, and Knickerbocker died of a fractured skull and punctured lung.

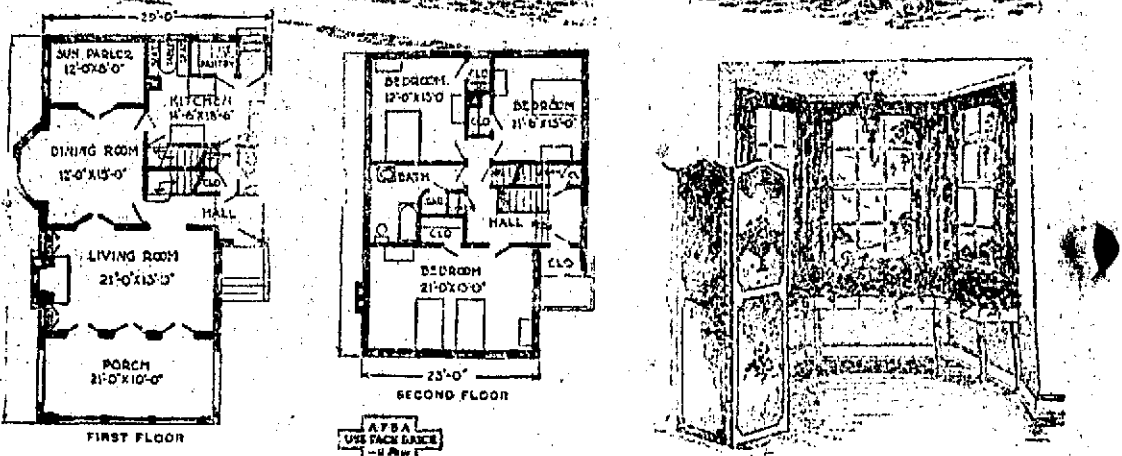

Funeral services will be held at Auburn, Wash., the home of Knickerbocker's parents.

Three feature drawings gained "Knick" a wide following. These were "The Tinymites," an imaginative daily story for children by Hal Cochran with illustrations by "Knick"; "Dizzy Dugan," a popular sports feature, and "Little Joe," a humorous daily sketch of general appeal. In addition, "Knick" drew illustrations for feature stories on the news and sports pages.

Knickerbocker was born in Auburn, Wash., and roved over the country in search of adventure while he was still in his teens. He worked on a farm, in a lumber camp and on a railroad, enlisted in the army the day the United States entered the World War and served in France with the A. E. F. A Well-Planned City House

Six-Room House No. 638

Designed for American Face Association

MANY houses of today have only glazed sun porches, while the old ones had only open porches. This design has both an open one for shade on hot summer days, and a closed one for warmth and cheerfulness during the winter. The open porch on the front of the house is an especially attractive feature of this design.

This has been designed for a small inside city lot, yet thought has been expended on the appearance of the sides so that in exposed locations they may present a good effect from all quarters. Flemish or Garden Wall Bond will give a delightful finishing touch to the brickwork.

A study of the floor plans will at once reveal the fact that nothing has been omitted to make a modern home. The main rooms are large, the living room opening on one side to a screened porch, while a sun parlor opens from the dining room, to which space is added by a good bay, useful for flowers and the like.

The kitchen is well lighted and ventilated, with the windows over the sink on one side and the built-in breakfast nook on the other. The refrigerator is placed in the pantry and lead from outside. There is a connection from the kitchen to the front hall passing the lavatory, coat closet, and basement stairs, and giving convenient access to the front door.

On the second floor are three large bedrooms, all well lighted and ventilated, an ample bathroom, and numerous closets. Stairways to the attic and to the kitchen are very desirable features.

The basement contains heater and fuel room, laundry drying space, vegetable cellar and a garbage incinerator. There is an outside entrance to the basement.

The ceiling heights are 8 feet 6 inches, and the content is 36,000 cubic feet.

With a driveway at one side as shown, forty-five to fifty feet would be the minimum lot. The first floor is well above the ground, giving good basement light.

What, If Anything, Is Wrong With The Cotton Farmer?

By Kenneth Sager

It is reasonable to assume that something is the matter with the average cotton farmer. One hears from him on all sides. The Federal Farm Board is making plans at present to give $10,000,000 in relieving the cotton farmer from a situation that it thinks is of prime importance, the problem of marketing the crop. So it seems to be generally agreed that something is actually wrong with the cotton farmer.

The purpose of this article is not to find fault with the cotton farmer or his system of farming but to set down some points that might be of benefit to the average cotton farmer.

There is one main point which subdivides itself into several subheads. The point is this: the average cotton farmer is not running a business. By that I mean that it is not conducted as efficiently as a grocery or dry goods business with the same amount of money invested in it.

Only the best cotton farmers keep any record of their business. To analyze the farm business and locate the weak spots and the leaks it is necessary to have a fairly comprehensive record of farm records. Five minutes a day is ample time to keep all the records necessary on the average farm.

Low yields per acre, while important, is not nearly as important as low yields per man or per family. How can we increase the yield per man? Whole books have been written on that subject so an article of this length cannot deal with it very thoroughly but here are a few ways of increasing the yields per man or family. First, increase the yields per acre as much as can be done economically by using the variety of seed best adapted to your soil, climate and market demand. For instance, the demand for short staple cotton seems to be decreasing so why not grow a little longer staple variety of cotton that is equally well adapted to your soil and climate. We are not suffering from too large a crop of cotton but from too much cotton of a kind that is not in demand.

Yields per acre may be increased, also, by growing crops in a regular sequence including a legume crop that is turned under once during the rotation. Take care of the farm manure—it is very valuable if properly handled. After every source of fertility on the farm has been exhausted then, and only then, resort to the use of commercial fertilizer to balance the fertilizer produced on the farm. If all the cotton plant but that returned to the soil very little fertility would be sold from the farm.

Besides increasing yields per acre, the yield per man may be increased by the use of more land. More land may be used by employing less intensive method of cultivation, more pasture and more livestock, larger and better shaped fields which will permit the use of larger machinery. One man, two mules and a one-row cultivator can cultivate almost as much land as two men, two mules and two Georgia stocks, thereby allowing the other man to care for additional acres or freeing him for other work. The extra livestock kept on the larger farm is a great advantage also. They produce additional fertilizer and a good cow is making money for the farmer while he tends his cotton or while he sleeps.

How many merchants would expect to keep their stores closed except for three or four months in the spring and early summer and about two months in the fall? Is that not what we, the average cotton farmer, do when we plant a little cotton and a little corn and expect it to furnish us a living? The more successful cotton farmers have some productive work to do every day in the year. They have some good cows to feed and care for, some good producing chickens to tend to, some manure to haul out and distribute, some sweet potatoes to cure and haul to market, a nice lot of $3.00 per bushel peas to thresh, etc. They stay open every day in the year. A farmer's net income depends more on the number of days he spends at productive labor than it does on the number of bales of cotton he produces.

Use your county agent and your Smith-Hughes man. You help pay for them. They are your servants and are prepared to help you with your farm problems.

Running water is the most powerful agent known in carving mountains and surfaces at high altitudes.

Byrd and His Men Await Rescue

Marooned behind 300 miles of solidifying ice at "the bottom of the world" and unprepared to face the rigors of another Antarctic winter Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, upper right, and his 39 companions in Little America may be in dire peril unless one of the Norwegian or British whaling vessels in the region break through to their rescue. The Byrd ship City of New York, en route to bring back the stranded party, was halted more than 500 miles from its objective, as shown on the map, upper left. Lower left you see a typical view of the great ice pack which surrounds the Antarctic continent. In the center are Bendik Johnson (top), ice pilot for the expedition, and Capt. Frederick C. Melville, skipper of the City of New York, upon whom the safety of the explorers may depend.

JUDITH CAMERON, typist in a New York publishing house, was a beautiful girl, with a head full of ideas and a heart full of love. She was a girl who was not afraid to love, and she was a girl who was not afraid to be loved.

A handsome man in a tuxedo interrupted her by a call from the telephone. She picked up the receiver and heard a voice that was familiar to her. It was the voice of the man who had been with her for so long.

been locked up and was waiting for release on bail. Tony was at liberty to leave but had no way of reaching home except to wait for his father's arrival. Mortimer was held for exceeding the speed limit and driving while under the influence of liquor. The policeman who had made the arrest reported the car was making 80 miles an hour.

"Just imagine, Judith," said Knight, his voice sinking to a husky pitch. "Imagine going into a police station to get my own daughter—"

Judith was deeply sorry for him. After he had left the house Judith tried to rest. She lay on the bed, closed her eyes, but sleep would not come. After what seemed like a long while she arose, dressed and went downstairs and hunted for Sandy.

Strapping a leash to the dog's collar, she set out for their morning walk.

What was she to do about Tony? It would have been better for Judith Knight's welfare if she had spent that 45 minutes pondering what Tony might do to her and how she could defend herself.

At 12 o'clock Judith was home again. A second time she carried a breakfast tray up the stairs and knocked softly at Tony's door.

"Who's there?"

"It's Judith," the girl answered. "What do you want?"

Judith pushed the door back and stepped across the threshold.

"Food!" Tony roared as she glimpsed the tray. "Take it away!"

"I thought you might want something," Tony said. "It's 12 o'clock."

"Don't care. Never want to see food again."

"Couldn't you drink some coffee?" Judith poured a cupful of the steaming beverage and carried it to the girl. Pulling herself up, so she sat cross-legged, in bed, the younger girl sipped the drink.

Judith sank to one of the tiny, spindle-legged French chairs. She wondered how in the world to begin. Finally she said:

"Tony, I want to talk to you."

"Yeah? Three guesses what about!"

"Oh, you know what it's about as well as I do. I guess there's no way but to come directly to the point. Your father feels terribly about what happened—"

Before she could finish the sentence Tony straightened up and interrupted.

"You can stop right there! You're not going to lecture me. Listen, didn't I tell you a few hours ago who's to blame for all this and I'm going to put a stop to it? Didn't you hear me say that?"

"But, Tony—"

"No? Well, you'll be finding out soon enough, so don't let that worry you."

JUDITH knew that she had failed. "But won't you listen to me?" she begged. "Don't you see I just want to help you?"

"Oh, you do!" sneered the girl on the bed. "Want to help yourself, you mean. Get me out of the way so you can dig deeper into my father's dough! I've understood that all along from the beginning. Makes you sore because I see through your graft, doesn't it?"

Judith moved her lips to speak but Tony went ahead:

"Listen, my blond friend," she said. "Ever since you've been in this house there's been trouble. You've turned my father against me. You've got him so he suspects everything I say or do. You make him think what you do is perfect."

And everything I do is a sin. And now if you'll take my advice you'll clear out! Because let me tell you, Miss Snoopy, that things will happen you're not looking for. And what's more, you'll go! Now get out of here and let me sleep."

It was no use!

Without a word Judith arose, left the tray where it stood and went out of the room. Then she shut the door behind her, leaning against it weakly for a moment and clenching her hands so tightly they colored first red and then white.

"Oh, God," she prayed, "don't let me hate her so!"

Crossing the hall into her own room, Judith paced back and forth, back and forth for several minutes. She was tired, nervous and overwrought. At last, thoroughly exhausted, she crept to the bed and fell asleep.

THE situation in the Knight household became unbearable. For two miserable days the atmosphere was alternately tense with impending drama or nerve-racking in its silent gloom.

Arthur stormed at Tony. At times the girl stormed back and at other times she wept. She had been forbidden to take out her car. In retaliation Tony refused to leave her bedroom.

Judith felt like a lost soul, wandering between the two. She was aware that the younger girl's antagonism toward her had crystallized. Vaguely she understood the danger and yet she did not think of the one likely spot where Tony Knight could strike—and strike sure!

This was unfortunate.

She could not tell if Tony communicated with Mickey Mortimer or not, but believed she did. There was a telephone extension in the girl's room. Moreover, Tony was resourceful and she was rebellious.

Judith, foreseeing no end to the wretched state of affairs, began to face new terrors. Things could not go on much longer. She was afraid Tony would commit some horrible act of revenge—perhaps go away with Mortimer!

It was these thoughts which drove Judith Knight finally to her last desperate course of action. She telephoned to Andy Craig.

It was the morning of the third day Tony had kept to her room. The idea came as a sudden inspiration while Judith was checking over household accounts for the week. She sat at her writing desk, neat pad of paper before her and pencil in hand; but instead of copying figures and adding them in tidy columns, Judith was making odd little squares and circles and then blackening them.

Andy Craig!

Although a sudden ray of light had come pouring through the window, writing Andy's name in letters of gold and scattering the degradation, Judith sat up very straight in her chair. Of course Andy was the one person to whom to appeal.

She hurried downstairs, passed through the living room into Arthur's study and shut the door carefully behind her. Then she took down the telephone receiver and called the number of Hunter Brothers.

Quite recklessly she asked to speak to Andrew Craig and then, when she heard his voice, announced, "This is Judith."

The young man's tone expressed surprise.

"Well—good morning! I feel highly honored."

Judith was in no mood for light pleasantries.

"Listen, Andy," she said earnestly. "I've got to see you. Just as soon as possible. It's very important."

"I hope nothing—"

"No, I can't tell you anything at all just now. It's something I'm sure you can help me with, though. If I come in at once can I meet you somewhere?"

He assured her that was possible and said he was leaving the office at 12 o'clock.

"Then I'll meet you anywhere you say at that time. Where shall it be?"

Craig urged her to set the meeting place herself. Judith thought swiftly.

"Let's make it that 'Hookery' place that Tony took us to. It's quite near the Hunter building. You remember?"

Yes, Craig remembered. He said he would meet her there at 10 minutes past 12 o'clock. Judith replaced his receiver of the telephone, satisfied.

SH was waiting in the Hookery when Andy Craig's towering six feet loomed in the doorway. He examined the room, found her and went over to the table at which she sat.

After that Judith and the young man sat in serious conversation for nearly 45 minutes. The girl did most of the talking. She reviewed the turbulence of the home which she had just left. Craig listened, nodded and now and then interrupted to ask questions.

At the close of the conversation just before they got up to leave a silence fell between them.

"I don't know how much good it will do, Judith," Andy said finally. "I'm not very hopeful but I'll try."

Apparently this answer was what Judith had been waiting for.

"Oh, but I'm sure you can do it!" she told him eagerly. "Her face brightened and she smiled. 'It's not time to be going now,' she added and both of them arose."

Craig paid the check and the two stepped out on the street. They turned and walked away together toward the right.

They were an attractive looking couple together. Judith, trying to fit her steps to the swinging strides of the man, chatted gaily now that the serious business of the interview was ended.

It was not, however, because the man and the girl looked so sympathetic together that a third person, a man on the opposite side of the street, paused to watch them.

The man was Arthur Knight. He was walking from the opposite direction and he had been just in time to see Judith and Andy emerge from the Hookery, hesitate an instant and then start off to gether down the street.

As his eye first lighted upon the pair Knight started. He slowed his steps, stopped and then stared across the street. Obviously, without the slightest chance for doubt, he saw his wife laughing and smiling into the eyes of Andrew Craig.

Something like a gray shadow crossed Knight's face. He continued walking, finished his errand and returned to his office.

At home that evening before the fireplace he asked in the quietest, most casual manner in the world: "Did you run into town to amuse yourself today, dear?"

His wife smiled serenely, and answered with a negative shake of the head:

"No—I was home here all afternoon."

4-H Club Work

My experience in 4-H club work was in the year of '23, when Miss and Miss Fenton, were county and home demonstration agents. I took poultry as my project and all requirements in serving, attended all club meetings, but did not go to the annual 4-H club camp held at Marietta, Ark.

Three years before we had this work again. But in 1927, M. H. County agent and Miss Buechley home demonstration agent came to DeAnn and organized 4-H club work. Of course I was eager to join.

I took as my project, gardening, canning, cooking and sewing. I attended all club meetings and club rally. But did not attend the annual 4-H club camp at Fayetteville.

I made an exhibit at the county fair, the required number of things in sewing and canning. And won first place in sewing.

In 1928, Mr. Smith and Miss Buechley were our county and home demonstration agents again. I took as my project the same as in 1927. By having the best garden in my club, the Hope Fertilizer Company gave me a 100 pound sack of fertilizer free.

In July 1928, Miss Cardie Burke, who gave a demonstration on "A Canning Budget for a Family of Five for Six Months" to win a free trip to farmer's week at Fayetteville, and only won second place. I attended the annual 4-H club camp anyway. There I entered the sewing judging contest, and won no honors but felt sure I learned a great deal through the experience.

I made my exhibit of required things at the county fair and won $1.50.

By having the best history of my club work in Hempstead county, I was awarded a free trip to the Arkansas State Fair. I made an exhibit of all my work there, and won several honors.

In 1929 I took as my project, gardening, canning, cooking, sewing and a best type calf. I was elected president of DeAnn club.

At our club rally I told about my trip to the State fair. I was elected secretary of Hempstead county 4-H club also at the rally.

In July, I entered a dress contest to win a free trip to Fayetteville. Only won third place, although I attended Farmers' week at Fayetteville anyway. There I was in a milk food drill for the pigskin. I entered a clothing judging contest. Among the girls judging sewing I scored about fifth place. I hope to score about first this year.

At the county fair I was superintendent of girls club work. I made an exhibit of 21 jars of fruit and vegetables and my required amount of sewing. Won $22.00.

I have canned for this year 85 quarts of fruit and vegetables for home use and have 30 pounds of dried fruits and vegetables yet.

To the state fair I only sent three jars of ogra, one rug and all my record books. Winning second on ogra, first on all record books amounting to $12.00.

A 4-H garden contest was held in the county through the cooperation of S. L. Allen & Co., Inc., makers of garden tools. I being the county champion, was awarded the prize of a Planet Jr. single wheel hoe, valued at $7.75.

The state prize will be a Planet Jr. No. 2 combination weeder and seed hoe valued at $13.00.

The national prize will be awarded to the best state champion and will be a scholarship of $33 to be used to attend school.

I also have a chance to win the state and national prizes. Here's hoping I do.

I have enjoyed my three years of club work, with Home Demonstration Agent Miss Buechley very much. I hate to see her leave Hempstead county. Only hope she enjoys her work wherever she may go.

I shall be a 4-H club worker and booster always for it gets hold of young rural people, while their minds are plastic; gives them guidance when they need it; teaches them some of the inspiring things in agriculture and farm home life and gives them a vision of its possibilities as a life work.
